Subject: federal $ for expedited testing

Kevin Stanton from DPS contacted me to say (again) that they have $10K from the federal government that they would like to transfer to us, via a Project Safe Neighborhood mini grant. I will complete the paperwork and hopefully this time we'll actually receive some funding. It isn't much money but I think it would be best utilized for overtime or for consultant time (may not be politically palatable at a time when layoffs are still being discussed). What do you think? Are there other things we should consider? Small equipment, lab supplies etc???

The trick is making this appear "project" like. I would appreciate you thoughts on how we could best accomplish this expedited testing.

If we do decide on OT or a consultant, we will need to have good records related to use of the funds and the analysis of the federal samples. For example, we may designate X hrs/week of OT for the analysis of DOJ cases. I am open to ideas/suggestions.

Are you in tomorrow? If so, can we meet briefly to toss some ideas around?

Thanks, Julie
